

Dilute color carriers-well Known German shepherd Dogs

This is a list of well-known dogs, or dogs from known lines that either carried the gene for, or produced blues and/or livers. Due to the amount of data being added, the white carriers are now on a separate list. One thing that should be learned from this list is that rather than criticizing a dog for carrying dilution genes it should be realized that many great dogs of the breed carry dilution genes and that carrying these genes is not a reason to discard a dog from consideration in breeding] provided that health, temperament, and structural factors meet acceptable standards.

The terms blue and liver were rarely used before the 1970s, especially the term liver. Germany uses the term "brown" to designate liver (and to confuse things more, Germany also uses the term brown when describing the marking color we know as „red.,,

*Note-Sometimes you will see dogs with very similar first names and the same kennel name.

These

may either be littermates or misspellings of the same dog's name in the studbooks. To ensure accuracy the variations were all listed.
